

2025 Federal Priorities: Child Nutrition Reauthorization

BOLD STRATEGIES TO FIGHT CHILD HUNGER

No child should ever go hungry. Yet far too many California children continue to face food insecurity, which has been exacerbated by food inflation: 27% of all California households with children are food insecure, with deep disparities for Black (43%) and Latine (33%) families. Rapidly deteriorating economic conditions threaten to worsen child and family hunger.

No Cuts - Invest in Critical Child Nutrition Programs

California made history by becoming the first state in the nation to enact healthy school meals for all, ensuring all children can receive two meals at school at no cost and free of shame, stigma, and school meal debt.

At a time when families are facing worsening grocery affordability, programs like Healthy School Meals for All and Summer EBT (SUN Bucks), are crucial tools for ensuring children have reliable, year-round access to nourishing meals. Yet the end of effective COVID-era improvements created a hunger cliff cutting a third of the federal nutrition safety net, offsetting these gains.

Investments in child nutrition should never come at the expense of SNAP. While the 117th Congress enacted Summer EBT—a historic expansion—it’s cost was offset by ending SNAP Emergency Allotments prematurely, precipitating a hunger cliff for 5 million Californians, including 1.8 million children. We urge the 119th Congress to resist further cuts and policy shifts. Instead, we urge you to build on effective, bipartisan advances made during the pandemic and protect programs that ensure our children have the nutrition they need to grow, learn, and thrive. Prioritize children, not cuts—no child should ever go hungry.
